BUREAU OF FOREIGN COMMERCE

Loring K. Macy, Director

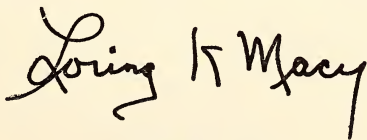

Foreword

This directory identifies for American businessmen the principal governmental and private organizations abroad actively engaged in promoting and facilitating trade and investment in the free world. Listings are limited to those organizations that have demonstrated a willingness to receive inquiries from United States firms and an ability to supply information within the organization's competence or to give publicity to the inquiries.

Most of the organizations described are "central," in that they are concerned with all or a major part of a country's economy. Others are secondary organizations, that is, groups serving specific branches of industry and trade or selected geographic areas of a country. Organizations devoted solely to the promotion of tourism are not included, nor are private businesses engaged in research and development.

Many banks are active in promoting investment and trade and in bringing new enterprise to the countries in which they are located. They refer inquiries to interested clients. Names and addresses of banks throughout the world may be found in commercial directories, such as the Rand McNally International Bankers Directory and Polk's Bank Directory. Because of space limitations, only governmental and semigovernmental banks are listed here.

This is the second edition of this directory. The first edition, entitled A Directory of Foreign Development Organizations for Trade and Investment, was published in 1957. Data in this revision are based on information submitted by the Foreign Service of the United States. The material was compiled by Marjorie V. Davis under the direction of Charles F. Boehm, Director, Commercial Intelligence Division, Office of Trade Promotion, Bureau of Foreign Commerce.

A Directory of Foreign Organizations For Trade and Investment Promotion

Names and mailing addresses of foreign organizations for trade and investment promotion are listed alphabetically by country in the language customary for the country. English translations of the names are given in parentheses. Some of the organizations maintain offices in the United States, and the addresses of those offices are included.

The specific types of trade and investment promotional activity in which the organizations are engaged are sketched; names of any periodicals, publications, or other media used for publicizing trade and investment opportunities are cited.

Correspondence in English is believed to be acceptable except as noted in individual entries.

A map of Africa is reproduced on pages 52 and 53 to identify the African countries referred to in this guide.
